

WaterHealth India Wins NCYM Special Recognition Award

July 15, 2011 – Kolkata, India: WaterHealth India was presented with a special recognition award at this year's National Competition for Young Managers (NCYM) in India. A flagship program of the All India Management Association (AIMA), the NCYM recognizes professionals from organizations across India for their thought leadership on specific themes relevant to the current business environment.

In alignment with the theme of this year's competition, "Creating Sustainable Indian Multinational Companies - Agenda for Action", Raghavendra Alse, Sabyasachi Mohapatra, and Subtantar Kashni presented a paper detailing WaterHealth's success in creating a positive impact on the lives of millions of underserved communities in rural India by providing safe drinking water through innovative water treatment technology. Part of the presentation also included a discussion on how WaterHealth leverages technology to build successful and sustainable social enterprises that support the needs of the less fortunate.

The jury presented the WaterHealth team with a special recognition award for their ongoing initiatives and success in the field.

Pictured from left to right: Subtantar Kashni, Sabyasachi Mohapatra and Raghavendra Alse